

Sarah Galica

Vice President – Transportation

Sarah oversees both domestic and international transportation for The Home Depot, encompassing domestic van and flatbed transportation, global trade risk and compliance, transportation sourcing, carrier relations, and daily operations. Recently, Sarah represented The Home Depot and testified before the Committee on Transportation & Infrastructure for the U.S. House of Representatives, sharing insights on the trucking industry, physical infrastructure needs, and the skilled trades gap.

With 30 years of experience in supply chain, Sarah has spent the last 17 years at The Home Depot, where she has held leadership roles in supply chain strategy, inventory management, distribution operations, and reverse logistics before assuming transportation responsibilities in 2021.

Before joining The Home Depot, Sarah led the supply chain development group at Office Depot, spent five years in business consulting with KPMG, and began her career with an international third-party logistics provider.

Sarah holds a BBA in Economics from The University of Georgia. In her spare time, she enjoys spending time with family, playing tennis, and socializing with friends in Atlanta.
