DESCRIPTION OF THE ISSUE

The COVID-19 pandemic has profoundly affected small businesses in DeKalb County, presenting several significant challenges that continue to impact their operations and viability:

- Financial Strain: Many small businesses in DeKalb County have faced financial strain due to reduced revenue & increased expenses related to health and safety measures, and limited access to capital.
- Supply Chain Disruptions: Small businesses in DeKalb County have encountered challenges related to supply chain disruptions, including delays in receiving inventory and materials, shortages of essential goods, and increased costs for sourcing products. These disruptions have hindered businesses' ability to fulfill customer orders and maintain consistent inventory levels, impacting their ability to meet market demand and generate revenue.
- Shifts in Consumer Behavior: The pandemic has prompted significant shifts in consumer behavior, including increased reliance on e-commerce and online shopping, preference for contactless payment methods, and changes in purchasing priorities. Small businesses in DeKalb County have had to adapt their marketing strategies, sales channels, and customer service practices to align with evolving consumer preferences and behaviors, which has required investment in technology and digital capabilities.
- Workforce Challenges: Small businesses in DeKalb County have faced workforce challenges, including difficulties in recruiting, and retaining employees, managing remote work arrangements, and ensuring workplace health and safety. The pandemic has also heightened concerns about employee well-being and mental health, requiring businesses to provide additional support and resources to their workforce.
